- The information provided in this introduction is mandatory for all Auckland University workshop participants. No late admissions.
- Please bring your loupes
- Please advise the conference organiser if you require latex free gloves
- You are assigned to stations in groups of 4 and then divided into two groups, A and B. Each station has an anatomical specimen consisting of a torso without arms.
- Work in pairs. You can swap with team members at your station if you all agree. Cases are designed to permit simultaneous operating by groups A and B. Show each other what you find.
- Consider it to be like a day in the operating theatre. Read up in advance, be efficient, work collaboratively, ask for help if you need it.

Anatomy Exam – see separate list 0800 – 1200.

Open to those who registered to sit the Saturday Practice Exam only. There is no room for observers. Optional. If you don't attend then others in your time session will receive more attention.

You can study in the anatomy museum .

Dissection workshop:

Cases will be advised closer to the time.
